(CNN) — The future of some of the biggest names in aviation, the dramatic rise of drones, the emergence of new plane makers and barnstorming displays of military and civilian hardware.

If there is a must-go global aviation event, this is it.

While Britain is still reeling from the shockwaves caused by the recent Brexit referendum, the planet's aeronautical industry is getting ready to descend, like every other year, upon the small town of Farnborough, some 40 miles southwest of London.

For a few days in the summer, Farnborough becomes the world's aviation capital.
